When asked if he was aware of what had happened in America on September 11, 2001 [redacted] stated that he had heard that innocents had been killed but did not know exactly when it had occurred. He was told that it had occurred in September and that thousands had been killed, [redacted] stated that who ever had done that had done so against the teaching of Islam and should be severely punished.

It was explained to him that there were many ways one could have helped the criminals. [redacted] insisted that he had not supported any criminal act in any way. If he had [redacted] stated, then he should be sent to court and put on trial. He would then accept the punishment that he deserved.

When asked if any of the men [redacted] had ever discussed the attacks or had ever acted in a manner that would lead him to believe that they were terrorists or criminals of any type. He stated no. He never saw any indication that they were involved in any crime.

[redacted] also insisted that at no time, [redacted]
He was positive that this had never occurred and stated that if it had, he would have told his first interrogator a long time ago.

According to [redacted]
[redacted] That was it. If he had ever known that he would ever wind up as a captive or if he had ever thought he would have been treated as he was when he was first captured, he would have never left his home. [redacted] claimed that when he was first captured, he was tortured by those asking him questions. He had to stand up for five days straight and answer questions. He was also forced to strip naked and stand in front of a female interrogator. [redacted] stated that he was extremely afraid and would have told his captors anything that he knew at that time. If he had not said anything then, then how could others think that he was lying.

According to [redacted]
[redacted] When asked if the condition of his life angered him, [redacted] stated no, it did not. The experience he had [redacted] were new things for him and they gave him hope. Investigators, he stated, could go to any of his family members, his neighbors or his friends and they would all say the same thing. He was not a criminal.
